Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. has presented an innovation in antiquities and numismatics for some time now. The system is simple. When you want an antiquity or coin in the sale, just bid the estimated price by phone, fax, web site, email or post. We will send you the antiquity or coin immediately. No waiting for the closing of the sale. Any and all antiquities or coins not sold before the closing date will be sent to the highest bidder on April 27th, 2016. All items carry a lifetime guarantee for authenticity.

EXAMPLE—You bid estimate on an item valued at $100.00 and if your bid is the 1st to reach us, you will receive the item immediately. If on the other hand, you bid $75.00 on the same item and are still the high bidder at the end of the sale, the item will be mailed to you after the closing date, April 27th, 2016.

If you are ever in the area, stop in to see us! Of course, it's best to call first. Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. reserves the right to refuse any bids.

GOLD

Ex Nervegna, Jameson, Vlasto, Moretti, and Adams Collections
2. CALABRIA, TARENTUM; 320 BC, Gold Stater, 8.54g. Fischer-Bossert-G5 (V4/R5), specimen j (this coin). Obv: Head of Persephone right wearing slight veil, stephanos ornamented with palmette, and triple-pendant earring. Rx: Poseidon seated left on diphros, holding trident and looking down at child Taras standing before him, with arms and head raised to Poseidon. Fischer-Bossert records only twelve staters of this type, from two dies; one die with two coins and our die with ten coins, five of which are in museums (Berlin, Florence, London, two in Paris).
Ex Larry Adams Collection, Triton XIX, Part 3, 4 January 2016, lot 2004
Ex Harlan J. Berk, Ltd., April 2002
Ex Athos D. Moretti Collection, NAC 13, 8 October 1998, lot 89
Ex Vlasto Collection (1947), no. 1 (this coin)
Ex Jameson Collection (1913), no. 137 (this coin)
Ex G. Nervegna Collection, Sambon-Canessa, 18 November 1907, lot 241. This very rare gold stater, only twelve recorded from two dies, is one of the most sought Greek gold coins. According to Wolfgang Fisher-Bossert, author of the standard work on early Tarentum, it is also the most frequently forged Greek gold coin. Recently an example that was sold in Europe for several hundred thousand francs turned out to be a forgery. Our example with a pedigree dating back over 100 years and from four major collections is for sure genuine.

The fact that Nervegna, Jameson, Vlasto, Moretti, and Adams all obtained this very coin for their important collections means that no better example was available and they had to have one of these because of its historic and artistic significance. This coin is doublestruck on the reverse, but so is Gulbenkian's, a collector who sought only the best coins and was very wealthy. A method of side lighting made his coin look flawless in his photograph but it is catalogued as doublestruck by Kenneth Jenkins who wrote the catalogue. Our coin also looks flawless in Jameson and Vlasto on plates reproduced by the same conventional method at the time. This coin represents a significant opportunity for any educated or relevant collector or museum. Some flatness behind ear and scrape on neck, on reverse some small contact marks in field and figures somewhat doublestruck. aEF 39500

88. ATTICA, ATHENS; c. 505-500/490 BC, Tetradrachm, 16.85g. Asyt-Group III, cf. Seltman-328, pl. XV (unique in Berlin, from same rev. die P273, but slightly different obv. die A214, apparently by the same engraver). cf. Svoronos pl. 6.7 (the same Berlin coin). Obv: Helmeted head of Athena r. Rx: Owl standing r., head front; ΑΘΕ upwards on l., olive sprig upwards in lower r. field. In Seltman's Group L (Civic Mint) this is the only die with ethnic on left and olive sprig on right, rather than vice versa as usual. Our coin has, like the previously unique Berlin example from the same reverse die, a die break above the owl's head and three thin die breaks pointing upward on the right leg of the A of the ethnic. Ex Heinz Kowalski collection, Brussels, 1970s. Seltman's "Civic Mint" issue, though misnamed by him and dated too late, contained some very interesting coins, including the earliest to bear the famous Athena/owl types at Athens in our opinion. According to Seltman, the tetradrachms of this group were "superior in technique and style" and "the finest medallions ever produced in Athens"; Athena's features and helmet on the obverse were "carefully and effectively treated", while the owls on the reverse were "of special merit", "reminiscent of the style of the vase-painters of the period". This class, in our view, was a trial or experimental group like the earliest Croesus coins. The present coin in particular supports that idea, for its reverse type, struck in extremely high relief, places the olive branch at the lower right of the design rather than the upper left as usual, forcing the ethnic to be placed to the left rather than the right of the owl. This variant type occurs only on this one reverse die, otherwise known only from a coin in Berlin published by Seltman and Svoronos, which was struck from a similar but not the same obverse die. 89. ATTICA, ATHENS; c. 480 BC, Tetradrachm, 17.36g. Asyt Group VI, pl. XXXII, K. Obv: Helmeted head of Athena r. Rx: [Α]ΘΕ Owl standing r., head front, in upper l. field olive sprig (off flan). Ex Frank Kovacs; ex Grantland Collection, Norflan, CA. Beautifully centered and well struck. This is an example of what Seltman thought was the first issue of Athens. Actually, it turned out to be an extensive issue struck to pay for the war against the Persians. For that reason, many of the coins are struck with extremely worn dies and miserable centering. EF7750

The bucranium, here depicted with a beaded band tied around the bull's forehead and hanging down on both sides, is an unusual priestly attribute on Roman coins, otherwise occurring only on a small medallion of Commodus Caesar (BM pl. 84,13) and on the aureus and denarius of Augustus once attributed to Caius Caesar (BM pl. 17,14-15; see H. 327. ELAGABALUS; 218-222 AD, Eastern Mint, 219 AD, Denarius, 3.13g. BMC-p. 580, * and RIC-165, both citing R. It. 1891, p. 314 (F. Gnecchi, unpubl. coins in the Mus. Comunale, Trento); Thirion-321, pl. 5, citing and illustrating Münzhlg. Basel 6, 18 March 1936, lot 1872 (different dies than ours); cf. C-24 with rev. legend CONSVL (rather than just CONS) II P P (Paris, 30 Fr.). Obv: ANTONINVS PIVS FEL AVG Bust laureate, draped, cuirassed r. Rx: CONS - II P P Roma seated l. above shield, apparently wearing aegis with head of Medusa on breast, holding Victory in extended r. hand and transverse scepter in lowered l. arm. The apparent aegis on the breast of the figure is unusual and might argue for her identification as Minerva rather than Roma. This is a rare type on Elagabalus' Eastern denarii: none in Berk photofile, only two specimens in Reka Devnia hoard (rev. CONSVL), one in CoinArchives Pro (rev. CONS like ours, but from different dies both sides). Nevertheless Cohen's 30-franc estimate, apparently not a mere misprint since it is already found in his first edition, seems much too high: Cohen normally puts no premium on ordinary types that happen to be rare in a particular issue, since most collectors will not pay extra for such specialized rarities. Ex Berk 183, 28 March 2013, lot 276. From a group of plated ancient forgeries that came onto the market several years ago, mostly struck from just two die pairs: Elagabalus / Four Standards like our coin, and Julia Soaemias / Vesta seated type of Julia Domna. 329. JULIA SOAEMIAS, PLATED ANCIENT IMITATION; Fourrée Denarius, 3.40g. RIC-248, BM p. 539, f (ancient forgery). Obv: IVLIA SOAEMIAS AVGVSTA Bust draped r. Rx: AES - TA (sic) Vesta seated l. holding ladle and transverse scepter (top only rendered). The "barbarous" style and poor engraving of some letters (notably, A is consistently rendered as Λ, V in VESTA is upside down, and T has an "extra" crossbar at its bottom) reveals these denarii of Julia Soaemias and others of Elagabalus found with them to be ancient imitations, not products of the eastern mint that struck the prototypes. Also indicative of an unofficial issue is the wide variation of weight, ranging from 2.91g to 3.66g in the sample we obtained. The present coin of Julia Soaemias is a correctly identified in the BM catalogue as a hybrid with a reverse of Julia Domna, although the authors of RIC accept it without comment as an official type of Soaemias. P LIC COR VALERIANVS CAES for Valerian II,
P COR SAL VALERIANVS CAES for Saloninus.

Rx: Dog taking down fawn, barley grain on either side. Rizzo suggested that the famed artist who produced the magnificent Apollo-head issues at Katane, known as the 'Maestro della foglia', was also responsible for engraving the dies of this issue. Jenkins, in his later analysis, concurs with Rizzo's observation that the style on this very rare type is strikingly similar to that found on the famous Katane coins, and that the stylistic link, along with the occurrence of the 'signature', is evidence of the same hand at work. Calciati notes that Rizzo's argument is the only chronological evidence useful for dating the type. Exceptional example of this very rare type. Mint State3000

This piece was cut at one point in time, likely to have been done in antiquity. A portion of the heads and antlers are missing from the seal itself. As well, there is no evidence of a top border on the seal. Very possibly from a double register. cf: Ashmolean, 106 for complete piece. Ex Harlan J. 555. SYRIAN TERRACOTTA FERTILITY GODDESS, Bronze Age, ca. 1950-1750 BC. A beautiful, rare type. Much more elongated and realistically modeled compared to most idols of this period and region. Elegant, abstract form with arms touching just above the hip. Incised pubic triangle. Modeled in tan terracotta. A very unusual type. Losses to base, arm and head. 556. MESOPOTAMIAN LARGE ALABASTER VESSEL, ca. 1500- 800 BC. A beautiful example of a larger Mesopotamian alabaster vessel carefully sculpted from a single piece of veined alabaster. This piece likely dates to the Old Babylonian to Assyrian periods. While it is assembled from two large fragments, the vessel is largely intact and has an inscribed geometric pattern along the shoulder. H. 4 3/4" (12.1 cm) . 2500

558. SABEAN ALABASTER HEAD, ca. 2nd Century BC. This is a nice example of a nearly complete head fragment from a Sabean deep relief sculpture. Such pieces were likely votives placed at temples. The piece represents nearly the full face with wide classically Sabean eyes with dot pupils. The Sabaeans were based on the lucrative trade of frankincense and myrrh and this is where the famed biblical Queen of Sheba comes from. Scattered abrasions. H. 3" (7.6 cm)625

560. EGYPTIAN RARE BRONZE SEATED SCRIBE, New Kingdom to Late Period. A very rare bronze depicting an Egyptian scribe. He is seated cross-legged on the ground, attentively reading a document, his right hand resting on the unrolled papyrus. The scribe wears a short sleeve tunic and an elaborately braided wig reminiscent of late New Kingdom styles. Egyptian bronze scribes tend to appear in the New Kingdom and remain through the Late Period. The costume on this piece corresponds with the earlier New Kingdom dating. Brown patina with some porosity. Extremely rare type. Ex Minnesota Collection, 1970's. Ex Private Chicago Collection purchased pre-1980's. 561. EGYPTIAN BRONZE CAT WITH INSCRIBED BASE, Late Period, ca. 715-

330 BC. Elegantly proportioned with naturalistic details, depicted crouching with tail curled around right side, on an integral base with hieroglyphic inscription "Bastet, given life" at the front and the owner's name, "Nefer, son of Djed-thoth-iu-ef-ankh" on the side. This is quite an unusual depiction of an Egyptian cat in that it is postured in the crouching position. The head is held attentively with alert ears, the almond-shaped convex eyes defined, the bridge of the nose ridged, brows and cheek bones defined, muzzle detailed. Ex Jonathon Rosen Collection, 1970s. L. 3 1/8" H. 2 3/4" (8 cm x 7 cm)18500

562. EGYPTIAN STEATITE FIGURE, New Kingdom, ca. 1567-1085 BC. This piece depicts the head and upper torso of an Egyptian figure, likely a scribe or an attendant. On the backside of the piece, an inscribed pillar with several hieroglyphic characters. Pleasing face, a nice overall figural fragment. H. 3 1/2" (8.9 cm) with base 9" (22.9 cm)3500
563. EGYPTIAN BLACK STEATITE CLENCHED FIST AMULET, ca. 1000 BC. Carved in smooth black steatite, the long arm terminating in a clenched fist. An apotropaic ancient amulet whose modern counterpart is commonly referred to as mano fico or figa. L. 1 5/8" (4 cm)400
564. EGYPTIAN BRILLIANT BLUE FAIENCE USHABTI, Late Period, ca. 525 BC. This unusually colorful ushabti is very well modeled with two registers of hieroglyphic inscription in T-bar configuration. "Illuminate the Osiris, the sameref ("son whom he loves") priest, prophet of Khnum, and hereditary prince Hor[ankh, born of Imyet-pet and son of Netjer]-sankh-maat, true of voice." Last bit of inscription abridged due to lack of space, hence the brackets. The piece has a beautiful blue color, especially given that most ushabtis' color fades significantly over time. H. 5 1/8" (13 cm)3000
565. EGYPTIAN BLUE FAIENCE USHABTI, Late Period, ca. 715-330 BC. With a large single vertical register on the front. Very nice color with a chip to the nose and the beard. A shabti for a god's father, prophet, chief lector priest, and scribe. H. 5 1/4" with base 6" (13.3 cm)2800
566. EGYPTIAN FAIENCE HEAD OF PTAH, Late Period, ca. 715-330 BC. Pthah was the chief god of the ancient city of Memphis. He was a creator god who brought all things to being by thinking of them with his mind and saying their names with his tongue. He was unique amongst Egyptian creation gods in that his methods were intellectual, rather than physical. Pthah was also the patron god of skilled craftsmen and architects. One of the better detailed pieces we have seen. Mounted on a white marble base. Ex Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. 180th Buy or Bid Sale, lot 617, 16 August 2012. H. 1 1/8" (2.8 cm) Mounted 2 3/4" (7 cm)2500

Horus was the god of sky and divine kingship. The ears were drilled as the piece was most likely adorned with gold earrings, lost in antiquity. Wonderful detail throughout and very well balanced. Mounted on white marble base. Ex Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. 180th Buy or Bid Sale, lot 616, 16 August 2012. H. 1 3/4" (4.4 cm) Mounted 3 1/2" (9 cm)4250
568. EGYPTIAN DARK BLUE FAIENCE IMSETY AMULET, Late Period, ca. 715-330 BC. The four sons of Horus were responsible for protecting the internal organs of the deceased. Each of the four gods was associated with a particular canopic jar and its contents. From the late 18th Dynasty onwards the lids of the canopic jars were modeled in the forms of the four gods- jackal, baboon, hawk and man. Depictions and paintings of the four sons consisted of human figures with their characteristic head. Imsety protected the liver and was depicted as a human headed figure, mostly mummiform. Excellent style. Mounted. Ex Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. 177th Buy or Bid Sale, lot 414, 15 November 2011. L. 2 1/8" (5.4 cm)950

BRONZES

577. GREEK ARCHAIC LACONIAN KOUROS, ca. 650-600 BC. The statuette has a beautiful greenish black weathering layer with areas of reddish brown metal (probably cuprite), which are particularly evident along the right side of the body. Patches of green incrustation (malachite?) overlay the black layer. The surface condition makes it evident that the figure is ancient and has not been over-cleaned. There is some damage to the right knee, where a piece may have flaked off in antiquity. The statuette is otherwise intact. Bronze, solid-cast: weight, 1 pound 3.1 ounces. The statuette is one of the earliest figures to present the "kouros" format, so important for Archaic Greek sculpture, but it is old fashioned enough to be considered among Gisela Richer's "forerunners" of the type.[1] The kouros format is, of course, a nude, young man standing with his hands at his sides and one foot slightly advanced. The absence of a beard and (usually) of pubic hair creates the impression of youth, and often the figures may have been intended to represent youths on the threshold of puberty, but it is clear that many were also adults. Pubic hair and a moustache survive in paint on one stone kouros,[2] and pubic hair was shown in relief in some of the later examples.[3] This figure is arguably a boy. Not only does he lack beard and pubic hair, but also he is only 6.3 heads high, a proportion that appropriate for an adolescent.[4] He is, however, quite slim. The youth advances his left foot, and his forearms bend forward slightly, with fists tightly clenched.

The youth's head is uncouth by the standards of the sixth century. The large, bulging eyes are placed closely together high on the head. The eyes are bordered by very fine lids, and their strongly rounded shapes are emphasized by concentric eyebrows. The nose is rather long and its tip somewhat bulbous. The mouth is little more than a short, straight cut, bordered with equally straight, doughy lips. The face projects an image of ingenuous intensity. The cheekbones are scarcely hinted at by an almost imperceptible swelling. In profile, the forehead continues into the nose in a long project, diagonal line. The chin is sharply pointed. The ears are defined by wiry ridges that form a kind of beta pattern (reversed in the left ear). The hair arrangement is very unusual, being combed straight back to a long flat tail that comes to a point between the shoulder blades. Fine, carefully executed incisions texture the hair.

The torso is defined in simple terms and is schematic almost to the point of being geometric. The shoulders have a rectilinear silhouette, and the chest is almost prismatic, without definition of pectorals, collarbones, nipples, or navel, most of which appear in the vast majority of kouros. Only the youth's legs have real muscular articulation, with V shapes setting off the kneecap. In profile, his buttocks project emphatically, and his thighs are thick and powerful.

Many aspects of this figure find their best parallels in the first half of the seventh century BCE. Fully round eyes placed close together and short, straight mouths appear in a bronze bowl attachment of ca. 700 in Samos,[5] the Mantiklos Apollo, now in Boston, and the standing female found with him in Boeotia, now in the Walters Art Museum.[6] Huge eyes with very similar shapes appear in on a relief pithos and a terracotta plaque of this time.[7] Also similar are the features of a hammered bronze sheet with the head of a female wearing a polos crown in Olympia. The shapes of her eyes and eyebrows, the close placement of her eyes, her short mouth with straight lips, and even her beta-patterned ears are comparable. The relief at Olympia has been attributed to a Laconian workshop, but another, even more primitive repoussé mask with some of these characteristics has been excavated there. The similar typology suggests a local tradition.[8] The prismatic forms of the bronze youth's chest can be paralleled by one of the first known kouros in marble, a torso on Delos.[9] The statuette's square shoulders can be paralleled in Mantiklos' Apollo, an ivory girl of about 630 BCE from Athens.[10] and a bronze charioteer of ca. 650 in Olympia.[11] Most of these seventh century figures lack the prominent cheekbones of sixth century kouros, and the Olympia charioteer has beta-patterned ears. Articulated kneecaps are found in some early figures, such as the Olympia charioteer and a ram-carrier from Crete of about 620 BCE.[12] One of the most interesting parallels among the forerunners of the kouros format is a bronze statue from Dreros, Crete in the Heraklion museum, datable in the first half of the seventh century and perhaps even close to 700 BCE.[13] The statue has the large, very rounded eyes, the arched eyebrows, and the simple mouth of our statuette. He also has a relatively long, broad nose. The most striking parallel, however, is the hair arrangement. The Dreros statue has the same long flat tail of hair coming to a point between the shoulder blades as our bronze statuette. This hairstyle is virtually unparalleled in Early Greek art. Only remote similarities can be found in sixth century sculpture. Some hoplites wearing helmets may pull their hair back in this fashion,[14] but this is a special situation. A bronze statuette of a kouros in New York has a broad tail, which comes to a blunted point in the middle of his back.[15] The Dreros statue makes it highly likely not only that our statuette dates from the seventh century but also has an explicit connection with Crete. Most figures of the late seventh century have typical Daedalic hairstyles, which fall in broad steps to the shoulders, and this pointed tail links our statuette to an earlier tradition. Most early figures, however, place their feet virtually side-by-side. With his advanced left leg, our statuette is among the few seventh century statuettes that take up the stance used by kouros of ca. 600 and after. The advanced left leg, however, is not unknown in earlier times; it can be seen in the famous bronze kouros statuette from Delphi of about 630,[16] and an elongated warrior from Olympia of about 650.[17] Among statuettes of the early sixth century, those associated with the eastern Greek world have the closest relationship to this figure. Statuettes at Delphi[18] and Samos[19] have rather square shoulders and a schematic chest in which the pectorals are barely suggested and the navel and nipples are not indicated. Noses and lips are rather doughy, and no swellings mark the cheekbones in the piece at Delphi. The Samos figure has ears forming a beta pattern. The present statuette, however, is much more elongated, and his close-set eyes are more bizarre. He clearly belongs to both a different geographic setting and time frame. The connections with both Crete and the Peloponnese seen in our statuette fit well into the artistic world of ca. 600. Cretan sculptors were said by the Roman writer Pausanias to have been the teachers of the Laconian sculptors who executed major commissions at Olympia in the early sixth century.[20] It is, however, virtually certain that this statuette was not made in Crete, since male figures there were never nude in this period.[21] Cretans were credited with originating the custom of nudity and passing the tradition on to Sparta,[22] but nudity in art was evidently not part of this legacy. Wherever it was found, it seems likely that the statuette was a product of the Peloponnesian disciples of Cretan sculptors, and Olympia would be a good place for their interaction. The special hairstyle, furthermore, suggests that Cretan fashions may have followed along with artistic influence. This statuette thus represents an extraordinary and scantily documented moment of transition from the characteristic stylized and simplified renderings of the human figure that prevailed during most of the seventh century to the kouros of Archaic times. In this statuette, post-Geometric art is in the process of becoming better proportioned, more articulated, and taking on the subtle animation of middle Archaic kouros. Of monumental importance.

Our sculpture is at the larger size range for these with some being as small as 7.5 cm. Bronze kouri were votive and created to be viewed in profile. The art historic chronology of these is sketchy since so very few survived. Ex German Collection. H. 6 1/2" (16.9 cm) 120000

578. ROMAN BRONZE SWIMMER ORONTES, ca. 2nd Century AD. An incredible bronze statuette bust of a young swimmer emerging from waves: he is the personification of the river Orontes, beside which the town of Antioch was founded. Antioch was identified with Tyche, goddess of fortune and protector of the city. A similar Orontes is famously depicted in the Tyche bronze by the Greek painter and sculptor Eutykhides of Sikyon from the 3rd century BC. In the much admired, famous Greek composition Tyche is represented graciously seated on a rock, the youthful swimmer at her feet. Orontes rests atop the original bronze circular base, his muscular arms outstretched in an elegant swimmers stroke, his flowing hair and fine facial details carefully indicated. Interestingly, two small horns at the river god's hairline. A truly superb piece. H. 4 5/8" W. 8 1/4" (4.6 cm x 21 cm) 25000

Throughout the wooden body are inlaid engraved brass plates in floral design. An engraved plate on the stock depicts a shishi. The mechanism is frozen, otherwise the rifle appears to be in generally good shape. Acquired by a US serviceman with the occupation forces just after World War II. Bamboo tamping rod. Date: 1550 (published) Basle
Dimensions: 10.5 x 13.5 inches (26.7 cm x 33 cm)

This is an authentic, antique map of the Western Hemisphere showing North and South America connected as true continents. The map was published out of Basel as part of Sebastian Munster's Geographia in 1550.

This early edition of Munster's map is the earliest known map to focus on all of America and the first to officially name the Pacific Ocean "Mare Pacificum." North America is shown nearly bisected by the Sea of Verrazzano, which was the result of Verrazzano mistaking the waters west of the Outer Banks along North Carolina as the Pacific Ocean. The earliest appearance of Japan (Zipangri) shows the island positioned just west of North America with an archipelago and Pacific Ocean whose size is severely underestimated. The Yucatan Peninsula is depicted as an island (Iukatan) and Puerto Rico (named Sciana) is marked with the Castile and Leon flag of Spain.

South America displays a large western and eastern bulge, in which Cannibals are noted with a vignette of a severed limb outside of some bushes. Cannibals would be noted in the area of Brazil for well over 100 years after this map was published. A very early appearance of the Strait of Magellan is noted between the southern tip of South America and a large landmass (Tierra del Fuego), which for about 80 years after this map would be regarded as the great southern continent, commonly labeled "Magallanica or Terra Australis." In the southern Pacific, a large vignette of Magellan's Ship floats with sails up.

Date: 1873 (published) Philadelphia
Dimensions: 23.75 x 22.25 inches (60.3 cm x 56.5 cm)

This is an authentic, antique map of North America, illustrating the ideas of William Gilpin with regard to future population density based on economic potential. The map was published as part of the Mission of the North American People, Geographical, Social and Political in 1873.

William Gilpin was the first governor of Colorado and a major proponent of the transcontinental railroad, westward expansion, and the philosophy of Manifest Destiny, made popular in the 19th century for helping Americans believe that they were destined to expand their reaches from coast to coast and that the removal of Native Americans from their land was inevitable. He had radical ideas on how and why America should be populated, and to support his theories he did a series of maps including these three. Interestingly, they were some of the first to show economic potential for the West and to think in terms of regional resources and climates.

This map details Gilpin's belief that the most strategic position to capitalize off of manifest destiny was near Topeka, Kansas (noted with a small red circle) based on its central geographic location. Each circle in the map represents ranges of future population density (based on Gilpin's radical beliefs). The various colored regions differentiate related regions, primarily divided by mountain ranges that more or less relate to areas of terrestrial water flow.

Description: This is an extremely rare authentic hand-colored antique map of the Russian Empire, in two parts. It is considered one of the first accurate maps of the Russian Empire.

The area covered extends from the Baltic Sea to the Aleutian Islands and to the Caspian and Aral Seas in the south. It reflects Cary's extraordinary attention to detail, including provinces, cities and towns, and huge expanses of what would have been virgin forest. Other geographical details include rivers, plains, tundra and swamps. Interesting notes regarding Russian explorations and discoveries in the Arctic are included.

- Condition: This double map is in A condition with a minor centerfold separation on one page that has been reinforced with archival material on the verso. Wide borders on all sides. A superb example of this map.350

Date: 1606 / 1613 (published) Amsterdam
Dimensions: 16.5 x 20.5 inches (42 x 52 cm)

This elegant map by Hondius depicts India, Southeast Asia, China (south of Fujian), and the Philippines, as well as Ceylon (Sri Lanka), the Maldives, Andamans, northern Sumatra, and northern Borneo. Seaport towns are most densely noted along the coasts of India. The Singapore Strait appears to be misunderstood as a narrow channel cutting through the southern tip of the Malay Peninsula. Several false lakes are included in Chinae and India Extra Gangem. This fantastic work is embellished with two strapwork cartouches, a decorative distance scale, and vignettes of an oriental junk, a European sailing vessel and a ferocious sea monster in the Bay of Bengal. This map is from an edition of 1613 with Latin text on the verso, pages 346-347.

- Condition: Map is in very good condition with full margins and superb hand coloring.3250

Date: 1897 (circa) Japan
Dimensions: 13.6 x 55.4 inches (34.5 x 140.8 cm)

This great woodblock print is a conceptual, stylistic map of Japan, produced during the Meiji period (1868 - 1912). The Meiji period (meaning: Period of Enlightened Rule) is so named for the 45-year reign of Emperor Meiji and is the period associated with Japan's modernization and rise to world power status. The map, produced for the Japanese market, covers the whole of Japan and was designed for the use of travelers going from town to town by way of roads and railroads. All names and descriptions are in Japanese characters, with many of the larger towns having English names as well. In the lower right, a marvelous legend identifies towns and cities by various sizes, mountains, rivers, roads, railroads, ports, and passenger boat routes. This map was printed on two sheets, joined, and colored. It was originally issued folding for ease of travel.

Condition: Map is in B+ condition with a few small wormholes and minor soiling. There are several separations along the folds and a 5" edge tear at right that have all been closed on verso with archival materials.950
